

Sweet Gin and Old Yeller

From Dave Burns

Some of the stories I'd like to read about include the following: Sweet Gin and Old Yeller.

.....

From Jim Spier

When Dave B tells of Sweet Gin and Old Yeller I will expand on it some, if Dave doesn't cover it. I've seen Old Yeller in action and it made a believer of me.

.....

From Jim Spier

Sweet Gin had a case pocket knife that he could throw better than Jim Bowie.

There was a big blackjack game going on in the Gunners' hooch and a SP (cop) had begged into it. The SP got the deal and had a big run and piled up a pretty good stash. When someone finally hit a blackjack and took the deal, the SP scooped his pile up, said goodnight suckers and headed for the door.

Sweet Gin never got up from his chair and pegged the center of the door with Old Yeller just as the cops hand touched the door knob. Sweet Gin told him it would be rude to leave so early and to have a seat. Once the SP had lost back what Sweet Gin thought was appropriate, he was allowed to exit.